

Inclusive Pedagogy in Philosophy BLOOMINGTON, IN

The American Association of Philosophy Teachers (AAPT)
“To Improve The Quality Of Instruction In Philosophy At All Levels”

CALL FOR PARTICIPANTS

Location: Indiana University, Bloomington, IN
Date: Saturday, September 2, 2017
Time: 8:30am – 5pm
Seminar Leaders: Alida Liberman, University of Indianapolis
David W. Concepción, Ball State University
Christina Hendricks, University of British Columbia
Adam R. Thompson, University of Nebraska-Lincoln

Registration deadline: Friday July 28

Description

Participants will read some of the best literature regarding how learning happens, how to design maximally effective courses, and how to improve classroom practice with a special emphasis on inclusive pedagogy. The goal is not primarily to provide tips, although we will provide some. Rather, the workshop is designed to enhance participants’ ability to make highly effective pedagogical choices that enable all students to flourish. The interactive sessions provide opportunities for participants to reflect with colleagues on how to individualize evidence-based best teaching practices to their own idiosyncratic teaching contexts and their own understanding about what matters most for inclusive pedagogy. Participants will learn how to identify and select challenging, transformative, and inclusive learning objectives and how to design and assess sequences of learning activities to make the achievement of those goals highly likely. The friendships and collegial relationships begun here can last a lifetime.

Comments from Past Participants

“It is a game changer”

“The seminar shifted and honed the way I think about and practice teaching in substantial ways”

“Inspiring, fascinating, and incredibly helpful”

“There wasn't a minute wasted in the workshop”

“A must for anyone who cares about students”

“An intensive boot-camp for learner-centered education”

“Not at all like the typical (mostly useless) “teaching orientation” that most graduate students get”
